Coach Your Way Out
AI outreach and community growth setup guide

A reusable prompt guide from Amanda Carmichael and Coach Your Way Out

Set up an AI assistant to find relevant people on Instagram, publish approved Facebook group posts and invite suitable responders into your community. Personalise the brief below, then paste the prompts into one dedicated AI project or conversation.

How to use this guide

Complete steps 1 to 3 once. Then use the Instagram, Facebook and invitation prompts as separate jobs. Add recurring tasks only after the live test works. All prompt text is editable and can be copied directly from this document.

Your AI needs suitable tools and authorised account access to take action. A text-only assistant can prepare copy and prospect criteria; it cannot follow accounts or publish posts. The setup prompt checks this before promising execution.

1 Fill in your business brief

Replace the square brackets. If you do not know an answer, write ASK ME. Keep the brief in the same project as the remaining prompts.

Copy this prompt

Use this as my current outreach brief.

My name and business: [YOUR NAME AND BUSINESS]
My ideal client: [WHO THEY ARE, THEIR CURRENT STAGE AND WHAT THEY WANT HELP WITH]
My offer and outcome: [WHAT I HELP THEM DO]
Public signs of a good fit: [WORDS, QUALIFICATIONS, POSTS OR GOALS THEY MENTION]
Exclude: [COMPETITORS, WRONG BUSINESS TYPES OR OTHER CLEAR NON FITS]
Discovery sources: [RELEVANT EDUCATORS, TRAINING PROVIDERS, COMMUNITIES OR SEARCH TERMS]
My Instagram account: [PROFILE LINK]
My Facebook profile and target groups: [PROFILE LINK AND GROUP LINKS]
My community: [NAME, WHO IT HELPS, REAL BENEFITS AND JOIN LINK]
My voice: [E.G. WARM, DIRECT, UK ENGLISH, LIGHT EMOJI USE]
My timezone: [E.G. EUROPE/LONDON]

Summarise the fit criteria in plain English. Ask only for missing details needed to act. Do not invent links, benefits or account identities. Apply this brief to the prompts that follow.

2 Set the working instructions

Paste this once after your business brief. It defines how the separate jobs should work together.

Copy this prompt

Act as my outreach assistant for the business brief in this conversation. Help me build relevant connections and move suitable people towards my community. Work within the tools, permissions and platform rules available to you.

Keep three execution jobs separate: Instagram prospecting and connections; Facebook group posting; and responses to comments plus authorised private follow-ups. Scheduled posting slots should still be handled if a connection target is unfinished. Do content analysis separately from publishing.

Use direct evidence of fit from a person's bio, headline or posts. Following a relevant educator is a discovery clue, not proof they need my offer. Do not infer parenthood, financial difficulty or other private circumstances from appearance. Prioritise the stage and needs in my brief rather than broad engagement. A small number of posts is fine when the bio clearly fits.

Check the active account before sending or publishing. For each prospect, check current follow or connection status and relevant contact history. Skip people already followed, already connected, pending, previously declined or opted out. Do not spend a new outreach pass repeatedly reviewing an exhausted queue of existing connections.

Use one shared action record with the date and timezone, platform, profile or post link, evidence of fit, action, before and after state, status and next step. Save it using an available persistent file or record. If persistence is unavailable, give me a compact checkpoint to paste into the next session. Check this record across all jobs to prevent duplicates.

Execute the actions I authorise when your tools permit. Ask for approval only where genuinely required. If approval is required, prepare the named recipients, exact copy and destinations, then ask in one clear batch. Never treat this prompt as overriding a tool policy or approval rejection. Do not bypass rejected actions.

Respect group-specific posting, promotion, invitation and DM rules. Permission to post does not automatically permit inviting commenters elsewhere. Do not disguise recruitment as discussion. Stop affected actions on a fresh platform restriction or security challenge and report the exact observed message. Complete unaffected authorised work where possible.

Count only verified outcomes. Separate completed follows from pending requests, and sent requests from accepted connections. A draft is not a published post. Moderator approval queues are pending. Unknown results stay uncertain until checked; never blindly resubmit.

Report actual actions, shortfalls and specific blockers. Never promise background work or a schedule unless a real supported task has been created. Do not change my audience, quotas, copy or other tasks without an instruction. Exclude unfollowing, paid ads and email-list changes from this workflow.

3 Connect the tools and run a live test

Use this before the first outreach session. Connect accounts through your AI application’s own account flow. Do not paste passwords into a prompt.

Copy this setup and test prompt

> Check what you can actually do in this session. For each action below, tell me whether it is supported, needs account access, needs approval, or is unavailable: find Instagram profiles; follow suitable Instagram accounts; read and publish Facebook GROUP posts; reply to group comments; send private messages; save a persistent action record; and run scheduled tasks.
>
> Use a purpose-built connected tool where it supports the action. A tool that publishes to Facebook Pages is not evidence it can publish inside Facebook Groups. If no suitable action tool is available, tell me the specific limitation and prepare the material for me to use manually. Do not invent a connection or keep retrying an unavailable capability.
>
> Confirm my active profile on each connected platform. Read the current rules and posting permissions for each target group and record a short group register: link, allowed format, frequency limit, links allowed, community invitations allowed, DM restrictions and moderation status. Do not assume paid or VIP access.
> Prepare two short group-post options that name my ideal client's current stage or problem. Avoid broad side-hustle or advertise-your-business prompts unless that is my audience. Prepare one brief public community invitation and one private conversation opener based on something the person actually said. Show me this copy for approval before using it.
>
> Once the copy is approved and required access is ready, run a small live pilot: follow up to five fresh, clearly relevant Instagram profiles; publish one approved post in one eligible group; and, if an eligible unanswered comment already exists on my own post, send one approved public invitation where group rules allow. These are instructions to act where permitted, not just to make a plan. Do not invent a commenter if none exists.
>
> Verify each result and save the record. Return what actually happened, the usable links, any missing permissions and the next step. Do not set up recurring execution until the relevant live action has worked.

What a successful test establishes

You should see real Following or Requested states, a live post or a recorded moderator queue, and a visible reply where one was sent. A promise, drafted plan or task notification does not establish that these actions happened.

If only part of the test succeeds, keep that part usable. For example, Instagram connections can continue while Facebook group access is being resolved.

4 Find and connect with people on Instagram

Paste this for each live session, or use it as the body of a supported recurring task. Start with the pilot before choosing an ongoing target. Counts are workload goals, not guarantees that Instagram will permit that volume.

Copy this prompt

Find up to [NUMBER] fresh Instagram prospects who match my current business brief and follow the suitable accounts where permitted. If NUMBER is blank, use 10 for this session. Do not replace the requested connection work with a research list when you can perform the action.

Read the shared action record first. Discover people through relevant searches, training providers, recent discussions and the audiences of the educators in my brief. Use only supported tools or the visible authorised interface. Do not scrape, export follower lists or use unofficial bulk-follow methods.

For each promising person, check their own bio or public posts for a concrete fit signal. Prefer people at the stage I help. Do not assume they are interested in buying or that a shared follow makes them a qualified lead. Skip excluded competitors and clearly established businesses outside my intended stage. Low post counts are acceptable when their relevant role, goal or business stage is clear.

Check the current Follow, Following or Requested state before acting. Skip existing follows and requests immediately. Check prior-contact records and opt-outs. Never count opening a profile as a new connection.

Follow one suitable account at a time within the access and permissions available. Verify Following or Requested afterwards. Record the profile link, fit evidence and actual result. Count confirmed follows and pending requests separately. Do not unfollow anyone or automatically message every new follow.

If a fresh restriction or challenge appears, stop affected actions and record the wording and time. Do not try another route to force the action. If a saved restriction may be stale, report what was previously observed and what is known now; do not present an old warning as a fresh restriction. Follow current recovery requirements before resuming.

If a browser action times out, check the resulting state before retrying. Continue from the saved checkpoint rather than starting again or repeating completed actions. If you cannot reach the target, state the verified shortfall and reason.

Finish with a compact report: profiles reviewed, confirmed new follows, pending requests, skipped duplicates, remaining target and any blocker. Save the exact completed profile list and the next useful discovery source.

Optional conversation opener

Use this only when their public content supports the observation and messaging is authorised. Replace the brackets with something specific; never invent familiarity.

Hi [FIRST NAME], I noticed you mentioned [THEIR ACTUAL POST OR GOAL]. How has that been going for you?

5 Prepare and publish Facebook group posts

Prepare copy in a batch, approve it once, then keep publishing runs focused on the selected slot. Group rules take priority over a desired posting frequency.

Copy this post preparation prompt

> Create six short Facebook group discussion posts for my ideal client. Each must name either the audience and stage, or a recognisable problem connected to my offer. Use natural wording and one clear question. Do not invite everyone to advertise their business or suggest that unrelated engagement is a successful lead result.
>
> For each post, show the exact copy, who it should attract, which approved groups permit it, and whether it is a genuine discussion or a community invitation. Do not disguise a promotional invitation as discussion. Keep benefits and claims grounded in my business brief. Suggest a clear, legible native text-post background only where available and suitable. Do not publish yet; ask me to approve the bank.

Examples of the difference

Broad: “Anyone exploring a side hustle?” This leaves the business type open. Specific: “Any working mum coaches still figuring out how to get your first paying client?” This names both the audience and the stage. Adapt the specificity to your own niche.

Copy this publishing prompt after approving the bank

> Publish the approved Facebook group posts for [TODAY OR THE DUE SLOT], using my confirmed account and the group register. Use only approved copy and allowed formats. This job owns posts, not prospecting, comment replies or private messages.
>
> For each eligible group, inspect my recent and pending submissions and the shared record before posting. Pending submissions count towards quotas and duplicate checks. Never repeat the same wording in the same group within 48 hours; a stricter group rule takes precedence. Do not backfill missed slots or substitute different copy without my instruction.
>
> Submit each eligible post once and verify the outcome. Record the group, exact copy, submission time in the scheduling timezone and my timezone, direct link when available, and status: LIVE, PENDING, NOT SENT or UNCERTAIN. Do not claim a moderator queue is a published post or guarantee an approval time.
>
> If promotion or recruitment is prohibited, do not submit a community invitation there. A group-specific hold should not prevent authorised posts in other eligible groups. If the outcome of a submission is unclear, investigate before any retry.
>
> Finish with a short group-by-group outcome table and any shortfall. Save the record. Do not analyse performance during this publishing run.

6 Invite suitable commenters into your community

Use this after a post has responses. A reply about an unrelated business is not automatically a lead. Check both audience fit and the group's invitation rules.

Copy this prompt

Review responses to my own Facebook group posts using the shared record and approved post links. Where available, show all comments and inspect existing replies so you do not miss an invitation already sent.

Identify commenters whose words or profile show a relevant match to my business brief. Do not invite every advertiser just because they commented. Record unclear fit for review instead of claiming certainty. Exclude opt-outs, previous invitations, irrelevant businesses and competitor categories in my brief.

Where the group's current rules permit community invitations, reply directly to each eligible unanswered comment with the approved invitation, personalised with their name and, when useful, one genuine detail. Do not replace an approved direct invitation with a qualifying question. If a group prohibits recruitment or links, honour that restriction and do not route around it with unsolicited DMs.

Use this invitation structure, adapted to my approved voice and real community benefits:
"Love hearing about what you're building, [FIRST NAME]. I'm building a free community called [COMMUNITY NAME] for [SPECIFIC AUDIENCE] who want [RELEVANT OUTCOME], with [REAL SUPPORT OR RESOURCES]. I'd love to invite you in: [JOIN LINK]."

Verify each published reply under the correct person and save it. If a result is uncertain, check before sending anything again. Keep public invitations separate from messages and connection requests in the totals.

If I have authorised private follow-ups and the group permits them, check the person's current message history and opt-out status before sending one relevant follow-up. Do not send the same invitation twice, invent a previous conversation or chase someone who has declined. A public reply is not an email subscription or permission to add them to a mailing list.

Report comments reviewed, eligible people, public invitations sent, private messages sent, duplicates skipped and unresolved items. Report actual community joins only where visible or reliably attributable; otherwise mark joins unknown. Save the next unanswered comment or follow-up in the checkpoint.

Authorise private follow ups only if wanted

For this workflow, I authorise one relevant private follow-up to each verified public invitee, where the group and platform allow it. Use the approved message, check history first and respect opt-outs. Show me a batch only if a current tool requirement needs further approval.

7 Set up a daily routine after the test

This prompt sets up recurring work only if the AI application supports scheduled execution with the required tools. It does not create a schedule in an ordinary text-only chat.

Copy this prompt

Use the working live test and my approved brief to configure a simple daily routine. First inspect existing tasks so you update the correct task rather than creating overlapping copies. Do not change unrelated work. Confirm any missing scheduling details together in one question before activation.

Use these settings unless I replace them:
Instagram: target 10 relevant new follow actions per day, with confirmed follows and pending requests reported separately. Run one daily prospecting pass at 09:00 in my timezone. Treat this as a configurable goal, not a platform-safe allowance. Never force a quota through a restriction.
Facebook posts: one eligible submission per selected group at 15:00 and 20:00 America/New_York, only where each group's rules allow that frequency. Use one daily slot or less wherever required. Convert using the named timezones and daylight-saving rules, not a fixed UK offset. These are intended submission windows; actual execution and moderator approval may occur later.
Comment invitations: one pass at 10:00 in my timezone using the invitation instructions and current group permissions. Do not invent new comments or send repeat invitations if there are none.
Daily report: one concise report at 22:30 in my timezone.

Keep connections, publishing and replies as distinct execution jobs that read one shared record. Avoid overlapping browser use; queue or stagger jobs if the environment cannot run them independently. A publishing slot should not disappear because prospecting is incomplete. Keep weekly analysis separate from daily execution.

Before creating anything, confirm whether scheduled runs can actually use the necessary connected accounts, browser actions and approvals. If only reminders or draft preparation are supported, explain that and offer that version. Do not label a reminder as automated outreach.

Where recurring action is supported and permitted, create or update the scoped tasks using the approved prompts and settings. Follow any required authorisation process. Return the real task identifiers, named timezones, next run times and whether each task is active. If creation fails, report it accurately. Do not say anything is scheduled until the scheduling tool confirms it.

Check the first actual run against the saved action record. A configured task is not proof of successful outreach. If scheduled execution cannot complete an approval-dependent action unattended, tell me exactly which part needs me and preserve the prepared batch.

8 Review results and resume unfinished work

Use the first prompt for reporting and weekly improvement. Use the second when work has stopped or a new conversation needs to pick it up.

Copy this results and weekly review prompt

Review the saved results for [DATE OR DATE RANGE] in my timezone. This is read-only: do not send messages, follow accounts, publish posts or change schedules during reporting.

Show verified confirmed follows, pending follow requests, connection requests sent if relevant, public invitations, private messages, live posts, moderator-pending posts and attributable community joins. Separate my manual actions from your actions and count each once. State unknowns rather than using zero when evidence is missing. If a task result does not match its run or date, mark attribution uncertain.

For a weekly review, assess which posts reached my actual ideal client. Look at distinct suitable responders, relevant conversations, invitations and evidenced joins. Do not use total comments as a substitute for fit, or describe a follow as a purchase-ready lead.

Where the data permits, calculate suitable-responder share as suitable distinct responders divided by all distinct responders. Calculate invite-to-join conversion only for a defined cohort whose joins can be attributed. State the time window and any missing attribution. Avoid claiming a winner from a tiny or incomplete sample.

Recommend one specific content test for the next week. Keep the audience and goal consistent so the comparison is useful. Show proposed copy for approval before replacing my approved post bank. Keep routine reporting short and save detailed evidence in the record.

Copy this recovery and handover prompt

Resume the unfinished outreach using the latest brief and shared record. Read the current date, timezone, confirmed actions, exact next profiles or comments, approved copy and any blocker. Do not reconstruct the whole campaign if the checkpoint is sufficient.

Separate technical access failures, actual platform restrictions, group-rule holds and approval requirements. Quote the observed blocker and identify the affected action. Do not assume an old warning still applies or claim a prompt can override a tool rejection. Complete unaffected authorised work where possible.

Before retrying an uncertain send, inspect whether it already happened. Skip completed follows, pending requests and posted invitations. Do not silently disable other tasks or change their scope.

If I need to approve something, prepare one concrete batch showing names, profile links, destinations and exact message text, with completed items removed. Ask only for the approval still required by the current tool. Otherwise continue within my authorised scope.

Save a compact handover containing current brief version, date and timezone, completed totals and links, pending or uncertain actions, approved next actions, actual blockers and task identifiers. Finish by stating what was completed and what remains.
