

A FREE GUIDE FOR NEW COACHES

THE WILDHEART SHORTCUT

Clear the busywork. Keep your voice.
The smart way from qualified to booked without burning out.

BY AMANDA CARMICHAEL

THE WILDHEART COACH
amandacarmichaelcoaching.com

BURN BRIGHT. NOT OUT.

W E L C O M E

This isn't about becoming an AI expert.

Let's be honest about where you are. You trained to be a coach — a brilliant one. But nobody warned you how much of building a coaching business is everything except the coaching. The posts. The emails. The captions. The endless "what do I even say?"

That's the work that eats your evenings and keeps you from the thing you're actually good at. It's also the work that quietly burns you out before you've properly begun — and it's exactly the work a few smart shortcuts can take off your plate.

This isn't a lecture on artificial intelligence. You don't need to understand how it works any more than you need to understand engines to drive. What you need is a small number of practical, done-for-you prompts that get real work off your list today — mapped to the exact path a coach takes from quiet to booked.

The honest bit: a tool can write the caption. It can't tell you who you're for or why someone should choose you — that's the real work, and it's yours. What the shortcut does is clear the busywork so you've got the time and headspace to do it. Use it as your assistant, not your strategist.

Protecting your energy is the strategy. Let the robot do the boring bits, so you keep yourself for the part only you can do — and don't burn out getting there.

From qualified to booked — the WILD way

Every stuck coach is missing the same thing: not effort, not talent — a sequence. This is the order it goes in, and it spells the work itself: WILD. A shortcut can speed up every stage. It can't skip one.

STAGE ONE

Where you're at

Get specific about who you're for. A real, nameable person with a real problem — because vague gets ignored, and specific gets chosen. This is where most coaches are quietly stuck.

W

STAGE TWO

Identity

Find the story only you can tell. A qualification makes you a coach; your story makes you the coach for someone. The thing you're tempted to hide is the thing that sells you. This is the deep work — and it's your signature.

I

STAGE THREE

Lead

Build the offer that fits them, price it with a straight face, and become visible on purpose. Leading yourself — boundaries, self-trust, showing up — so being newer stops being something you apologise for.

L

STAGE FOUR

Deliver

Invite, and enrol without the ick — as service, not sleaze. Actually reaching out, asking, getting booked. Your first paying clients live here.

D

Two prompts per stage. Eight in all.

The next pages give you two shortcut prompts for each stage of WILD. They handle the doing — the drafting, the busywork, the "I'm staring at a blank screen." Copy, paste into your AI tool, fill the gold blanks, and go.

First, set your tool up with the onboarding prompt on the last page — it teaches the tool your world, so every other prompt comes back sharper and sounds like you.

Mind the line: these prompts help you express your niche and story — not decide them. The deciding is the real work, and it's hard to do alone, from inside your own head. The shortcut drafts; you direct.

The rule that keeps you, you

Notice how every prompt hands the final words back to you. That's on purpose. A shortcut kills the blank-screen panic — but your voice is what makes people choose you. Never fully outsource it.

The anti-burnout point

Every minute a shortcut saves on captions is a minute back for your family, your rest, or the coaching itself. That's not laziness. That's how you build without breaking.

Your person & your story

01 · STAGE W — PRESSURE-TEST YOUR NICHE

Where you're getting ignored

I'm a coach helping [who you think you help] with [the problem you think you solve]. Play devil's advocate: where is this too vague to get chosen? Ask me 5 sharp questions that force me to get more specific, one at a time.

02 · STAGE W — GET INSIDE YOUR CLIENT'S HEAD

Hear her in her own words

Act as my ideal client: [describe them in one line]. Speak as them. Tell me — in your own words — what keeps you up at night about [the problem], what you've already tried, and what you secretly wish someone would say to you.

03 · STAGE I — SURFACE YOUR STORY ANGLES

The moments that make her trust you

Here's my background: [paste a few rough paragraphs about your journey]. Pull out 3 moments that would make my ideal client feel "she's been where I am." Don't invent anything — only reflect what's there, and tell me why each one connects.

04 · STAGE I — TURN YOUR STORY INTO A SHORT INTRO

An About section that sounds like you

Using this story moment — [paste the one you chose] — draft a warm 100-word introduction for my About section, in my voice: [expert / friendly / dry / warm]. Keep it human, no coaching clichés. Give me 2 versions.

Your offer & your visibility

05 · STAGE L — CLARIFY YOUR OFFER IN ONE LINE

So a stranger instantly gets it

My offer is: [describe it], for [your person]. Rewrite it as one clear sentence a stranger would instantly understand — "I help X do Y so they can Z." Give me 3 options, plainest first, no jargon.

06 · STAGE L — NAME THE OBJECTIONS BEFORE THEY DO

Answer the hesitation in advance

For this offer — [paste your one-liner] — list the top 5 reasons my ideal client would hesitate to buy, and a warm, honest one-line response to each. No pushy sales tactics.

07 · STAGE L — A WEEK OF CONTENT, AIMED

Five posts, one afternoon

Plan 5 short social posts for the week, each speaking to [your person] about [the problem], in my voice: [tone]. One idea per post, a scroll-stopping first line, and leave the caption for me to finish so it stays mine.

08 · STAGE L — BEAT THE BLANK SCREEN

Three ways in when you're stuck

I want to post about [topic] but I'm stuck. Give me 3 different opening lines that would stop my ideal client scrolling, and for each, a one-line direction of where the post could go. I'll write the rest.

Keep your voice. See how each content prompt hands the final words back to you? That's the point. The shortcut ends the panic; your voice is what earns the yes.

Invite & enrol

09 · STAGE D — A WARM INVITATION, NOT A PITCH

Easy to send, easy to say yes to

Draft a warm, non-salesy message inviting someone who's been following me to a free chat about [your offer]. Short, human, no pressure. My tone: [warm / friendly]. Give me 2 versions.

10 · STAGE D — REFRAME YOUR FEAR OF SELLING

From "pushy" to "of service"

Act as a supportive coach. I feel uncomfortable "selling" my coaching. Ask me 4 questions that help me see offering my help as service rather than pushiness — one at a time, and reflect back what you hear.

S E T I T U P F I R S T

Train your tool to know you

Before the 10 prompts, paste this in once. It teaches your tool who you are, so every answer sounds like your world — not generic.

You're my behind-the-scenes assistant for building my coaching business. Keep everything you learn here and use it in every answer from now on.

I'm a [type] coach. I help [ideal client, one line] with [the problem you solve]. I'm in my first year, building this [alongside a job / around young kids / full-time]. Over the next 6–12 months I want to [goal 1] and [goal 2]. My biggest frustration is [your bottleneck].

The story behind why I coach: [a few rough sentences]. Never invent client results or stories — only work with what I give you.

My voice is [warm / dry / direct / friendly], I use contractions, and I hate corporate coaching clichés and hype. Keep my voice, and hand the final wording back to me to make it mine.

WHAT NEXT

A shortcut clears the busywork.

But it can't tell you who you're for, why they should choose you, or hold your nerve through the launch. That's the sequence — WILD — and it's the part that turns a qualified coach into a booked one, without burning out to get there.

If you're tired of throwing tactics at the wall and want the whole path - in order, built on you - that's exactly what I do inside WILD Coaching 1:1.

Burnout to Booked

Five short days, five videos, one clear start. How to begin your coaching business without running yourself into the ground — I'll email you the whole thing.

Join the 5-Day Challenge →

One line to remember: the shortcut clears the busywork. You do the work underneath — the deciding, the becoming, the being chosen. That's the part no tool can do, and it's exactly where the growth is.

Burn bright, not out.

Amanda Carmichael | The WILDHEART Coach | amandacarmichaelcoaching.com